Contest rules and details

The contest is open to everyone for participation.

To be eligible for prizes you must also sign up for Indeed Prime and be authorized to work in the US only.

We will be hosting the online contest from June 12th, 5:00 PM CST to June 13th, 5:00 PM CST.

You will be asked to solve 6 challenges, each with its own point value.

Please refrain from discussing strategy during the contest.

Any case of code plagiarism will result in disqualification of both the users from the contest.

You can code directly on our interface. We support all major languages. You can have a look at our environment page (<https://www.hackerrank.com/environment>) for more info. You can practice on HackerRank to get familiar with the coding editor.

HackerRank admin's decision will be final.

All participants should participate individually.

Scoring Rules

Each challenge has a pre-determined score.

Each submission for each problem will be scored, based on number of test cases it passes.

The total score of any participant is the sum of their maximum scores of each of the attempted problems.

Participants are ranked according to their scores. Cumulative time taken to solve the challenge is used as a tie-breaker.

Show off your skills

Indeed Prime shares the same vision as HackerRank - we believe in meritocracy, not pedigree. Show off your coding skills, outshine your peers, get awesome prizes and even get job offers from cool companies.
